Great support to those players who need it. And it teaches us how to become the best player possible. Thanks everyone. Its a great game at the beginning but then eventually it gets boring.. dont do this in real life youll go to jail trust me. Neat simple game. Takes a minute to figure out.

Really easy 100% achievements, just try to get all the lives and +1s.. ...terrible interactive design. I even cannot press "exit" on the initial interface with that bloody hand.. best game ever. very ggod game. Wow.

Audio is horrible.

Graphics are horrible.

Game is trash.

Play Heroes & Generals instead.

Seriously; this will give you cancer. I played for 5 minutes and the doc says it is terminal. I have 6 weeks. I wont even live to see Bannerlord now.

Screw you FoW. Screw you.. Songs of Perfidious Albion

I have played all through the first campaign now. First game in a long time I've actually 100% the achievements. I wouldn't consider the game difficult. I enjoy playing a few rounds before bed, the relaxing music and uncomplex gameplay is nice to unwind with. Just got the dlc (on sale 50%) and I am looking forward to seeing the new levels and abilities.

The game does require some replaying of levels to get enough upgrades to beat some, but I never found it repetitive. While the AI is simple, it is varied enough that levels don't always go the same way. Different colors seem to have different priorities in how they progress over the level. While they don't seem to fight each other out right, they do hurt each other if their antibodies hit other cells. Occasionally I will see one of the aggressive colors go after one of the others for one cell, but soon they are back attacking only me.

I would recommend this game (even at full price) to anyone who wants a relaxing game. It's simple and fun.. I like VR FPS a lot, and when I saw that Dimension Hunter was on offer, I checked out the trailer and dug the idea of the comic book style presentation and the fact that it had free locomotion.

Alas, it quickly became evident that the free locomotion was nothing more than an absolute afterthought, in a game designed to be a narrow "on rails" shooter with forced locomotion.

I played the first hour (more than half the campaign) with free locomotion, but the gameplay is so simple and bland I thought that maybe forced locomotion would push me into situations I would've otherwise backpedalled out of. I reckon for a few moments it DID make it less dull, but it's still just brain dead opponents running from their spawn point towards you, or a fixed spot and stand there until they die or kill you.

You only have akimbo pistols, but you DO get some augmented ammo/abilities like time slowdown (but I wanted the game to end quickly), sticky bomb shots, bouncing shots, penetrating shots. Might sound cool enough, but it all felt weak and lame.

The comic book style visuals also fell apart once in VR - it just comes across as a developers attempt to mask poor assets to be honest.

I really cannot recommend this game with so many other great shooters out there. If you haven't already, pick up Doom 3 BFG on offer and try out the excellent user made VR mod from Samson. 10+ hours of great VR FPS for peanuts.

The adventure game aspects are far to obtuse to capture a young audience while the narrative framing will hold little interest for older players.. cool game

. A real throwback. If you are expecting a contemplative, optimization-focused management simulation, then don't bother with this one. Because the game features a live-clock and a goofy character movement mechanic, a lot of the gameplay has more to do with efficiently planning your trips around the airport screen, rather than on the actual management.

The graphics are classic 90s "3D" - which is to say, very unattractive. The unnecessary voice-over work for the dialogue is kind of funny, but I wound up muting all the sound after a short while.

The calendar-based planning mechanic is cool, and it is challenging to plan routes that are profitable - but this winds up being such a small part of the game compared to watching my avatar stroll up and down the concourse.. My first impression is really positive. I'm looking forward to what this game will offer in the future! Sounds very promising though!
