it's a very amateurish game made in unity with a very, very bad voice acting. If you go to settings, you can't really change anything it seems, and when you come back to the menu there is no audio anymore, then you start a new game still no audio, you must exit the game and start it without seeing the options screen. Then you get in the game, you begin to search for these huge gasoline tanks to fill up your tiny oil lamp and your lamp is empty in like less than a minute? I've never seen a lamp run out of fuel so quickly. Then you reach a house that is, for the most part, is super dark so you won't get anywhere without your trusty lamp, I'm not sure if I can stack gasoline tanks for the lamp, but surely there aren't a many of them around to actually find out if they stack. The gameplay itself doesn't make sense, you must VERY SLOWLY tune the radio bit by bit, by pressing E each time, but the radio keeps teleporting. And you must constantly watch a mannequin that is gradually building itself up that is sitting at the table, you must break it, to prevent forming himself each time or when he does he will follow you around the house and kill you if he approaches you. It's really more like a cheap jumpscare kill, you don't really see it walking around the house, just suddenly you see it in your face and it's not that scary either. This game could be fixed, perhaps, with a lot of work. As of now surely not recommended.. It did look promising, but it was so bad I had to make a refund for this. Its cool with english in a russian accent, but the voice actors are so bad. The game itself and its mechanics consists of purely bad quality..
